La señora Dalloway (título original en inglés, Mrs. Dalloway) es la cuarta novela de Virginia Woolf, publicada el 14 de mayo de 1925. Detalla un día en la vida de Clarissa Dalloway, en la Inglaterra posterior a la Primera Guerra Mundial. La señora Dalloway continúa considerándose una de las más conocidas novelas de Woolf.

La novela sigue a Clarissa Dalloway a través de un solo día en Inglaterra después de la Gran Guerra en una narrativa de estilo de flujo de consciencia. Construida a través de dos pequeñas historias que Woolf había escrito previamente («La señora Dalloway en Bond Street» y su inconclusa «El Primer Ministro») la historia de la novela son los preparativos de Clarissa para una fiesta que va a ofrecer esa noche. Usando la perspectiva interior de la novela, Woolf se mueve hacia atrás y adelante en el tiempo, y dentro y fuera de la mente de varios personajes para construir una imagen completa, no sólo de la vida de Clarissa, sino de la estructura social de entreguerras.
